Through language the poet expresses the feelings of his conscious and unconscious mind. The poet expresses the inner-mental feelings of a character or himself with a special pattern of words, which is a mixed expression of conscious and unconscious mind. Poets have been successful in many ways in expressing the feelings buried in the unconscious mind by using their mental acumen properly, said Dr. Rajiv S Dayal, former Head of the Department of English, Kolhan University, as a guest speaker in a virtual webinar organized by the Department of English, Arka Jain University (AJU) on the topic 'Some Conscious Reflections on the Conscious and Unconscious in Poetry'. He made it clear by citing many examples of English poems that the reader needs to be equipped psychologically with many surfaces and perspectives to fully understand poetry.

Dr. Manoj Kumar Pathak, the event-coordinator and moderator of the said webinar, said that poetry expresses the truth to be felt and it can be understood keeping in mind the effect of human traits in understanding life.

Earlier to it, the Head of English Department of AJU, Prof. Rajkumari Ghosh congratulated the faculty members of the department and the participants.
