World Pharmacists Day was launched by the International Pharmaceutical Federation (FIP), with the organization's council choosing to establish the event in the late 2000s during a meeting in Istanbul, Turkey. The goal of the day is to draw attention to pharmacies and the good health advantages they provide, and FIP urges all its members to participate for the event to be a success. Each year, the organization releases a new topic so that individuals and organizations in the pharmaceutical business may organize national campaigns or community projects to highlight the wonderful work they do in improving people's health throughout the world. Giving lectures, conducting exhibitions, or planning an activity day for adults and children to illustrate the numerous ways that a pharmacy may serve them are all examples of some of the activities. World Pharmacists Day is observed on September 25 with the aim of promoting and advocating the role of the pharmacist in improving health all over the world and to encourage and promote activities that advocate the role of a pharmacist in improving health across the world. It is well known that pharmacists across the world help people get the best from their medicines. Furthermore, they are also the people who advise patients on how to take medicines so that they are most effective. Each year a new theme is developed to showcase the pharmacists in their positive role on health. The theme of World Pharmacist Day 2021 is "Pharmacy: Always trusted for your health." For many years, pharmacists have consistently been named among the top five most trusted professionals in national surveys. So, this theme represents that trust is a central part of all human relationships and a fundamental element of social capital.
