OBJECTIVE: To raise awareness about water conservation and instill a sense of responsibility towards sustainable water usage among students and the local community.

DETAILS: The department of Commerce, School of Commerce and Management, recognized the urgent need for heightened awareness regarding water conservation, given the escalating global water crisis. In response to this, the department organized a walkathon on World Water Day for students of BBA & B.COM (H), Semester II, IV & VI, and MBA. The primary objective was twofold: first, to emphasize the critical importance of water as a finite and essential resource, and second, to cultivate a collective sense of responsibility in protecting and conserving this precious commodity. Understanding the significance of World Water Day as a platform to mobilize public action, the walkathon was strategically designed to involve students, faculty, and the local community of Mohanpur. The overarching aim was to transcend academic boundaries and create a shared understanding of the challenges posed by water scarcity, urging participants to become active contributors to the solution. The walkathon served as an immersive and experiential learning opportunity, fostering a deeper connection between the participants and the cause of water conservation. By organizing this event, the department aimed not only to disseminate information but also to inspire a behavioral shift towards responsible water usage, both within the student body and the larger community.

The event was meticulously planned, featuring informative banners, placards, and interactive sessions strategically positioned along the walking route. These elements were carefully crafted to reinforce key messages about water conservation, sustainability, and the responsible utilization of this finite resource. Engaging discussions and activities were incorporated to ensure that participants not only absorbed the information but also actively participated in dialogue, deepening their understanding of the subject matter.

The invaluable contribution of Prof. Ankita Singh, the event coordinator, and Dr. Rama Singh, played a crucial role in ensuring the event's success. Their dedication and leadership were instrumental in creating an environment where participants felt both informed and motivated to take action.

Outcome: This walkathon stands as a testament to the department's dedication to fostering responsible citizenship among its students and the community at large. It is a reminder that small steps taken collectively can lead to substantial positive changes, especially in safeguarding our most invaluable resource—water.
