OBJECTIVE: Parent-teacher meetings for MBA students serve several objectives, aiming to foster collaboration between educators and parents to support the students' academic and personal growth. Parents provide insights into the student's behaviour, study habits, and learning preferences outside the classroom. Parents also received guidance on how they can support their child's academic journey and help them navigate the complexities of graduate business education.

TAKEAWAYS: Overall, the parents-teacher meeting serves as an opportunity for parents to gain valuable insights into their child's MBA experience, academic progress, and future career prospects, while also fostering a collaborative relationship between parents and faculty to support the student's success.
