INDUSTRIAL VISIT TO “SERICULTURE FARM”

Date of Event	18.11.2024
Name of the Event	Industrial visit to “Sericulture Farm”
Type of the Event	Experiential Learning/ Participative Learning/ Problem Solving Methodologies
Conducted by	Department of Fashion Design
No. Of Participant	10

Objective: The purpose of the industrial tour to the Sericulture Center was to give students a thorough grasp of the Sericulture sector. The purpose of the visit was to inform them about the many facets of sericulture, ranging from the raising and extraction of silk threads to the cultivation of numerous kinds of silkworms.

Details of the Event: The sericulture excursion to the Saraikela Kharsawan region was an enriching experience aimed at providing experiential learning and developing essential life skills for students. This visit was particularly beneficial for students from the Department of Fashion Design, as it allowed them to explore a crucial industry connected to their field of study.

During the visit, students had the opportunity to observe various stages of the sericulture process. They witnessed the mulberry tree plantation, which serves as the primary food source for silkworms, and saw the silkworms feeding and forming cocoons. They also visited the incubation room where eggs are carefully placed to hatch, marking the beginning of a new cycle of silk production.

Once the cocoons are gathered, the process of silk extraction begins. Students learned about how the finest cocoons are selected to allow the silkworms to mature into silk moths, which then lay eggs to restart the cycle. In addition to this, the center emphasized its role in skill development, as it offers training programs to local communities to help them engage in the sericulture industry.

The visit also included a tour of the silk processing facility, where students saw how silk fibers are carefully extracted from the cocoons and then coiled into spools, ready for weaving into fabric.

Accompanying the students on this industrial visit was Mr. Anup Kumar Singh, Assistant Professor, Department of Fashion Design.

Outcome: The objective of the industrial visit is to make students learn about:

1. Students learned about the life cycle of Silkworm from egg incubation to silk extraction
2. Students had an insight about production of different varieties of silk.
3. Learned about the cultural heritage about silk
4. Learned about Entrepreneurship perspectives of the Sericulture industry.

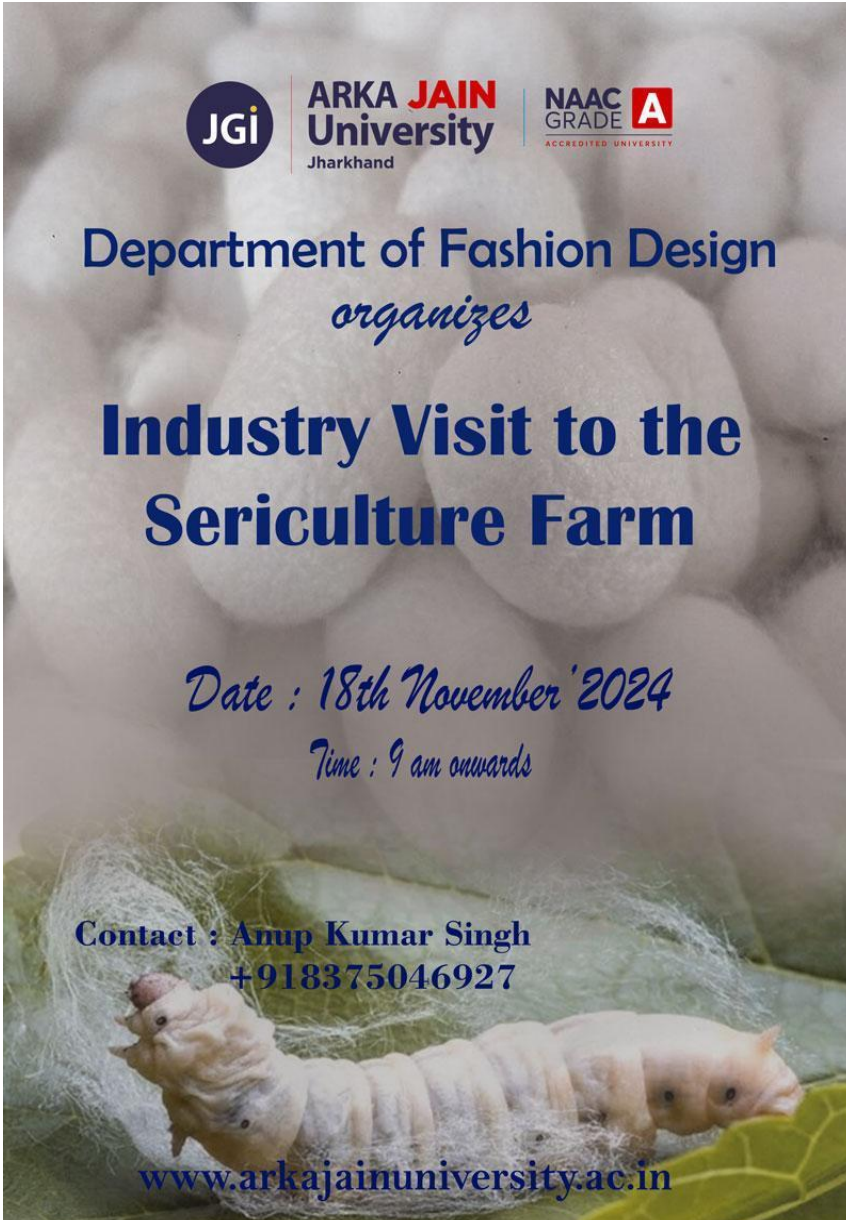

This excursion not only deepened students' knowledge of sericulture but also enriched their understanding of sustainable textile production and its broader economic and entrepreneurial implications.
