OBJECTIVE:

The Department of Optometry, Arka Jain University, in association with the National Service Scheme (NSS), conducted a Health check-up and eye screening camp on 08th Nov 2025 at Gagidih. The primary objective of the Health Check-up and Eye Screening Camp is to promote preventive healthcare by providing accessible, early detection of common health and vision-related issues.

The camp received active support from students, school staff, NSS, IKSHANA Club, Unnat Bharat Abhiyan volunteers, and a skilled team of optometrists from Arka Jain University. The event aims to raise awareness about the importance of regular medical and eye examinations, identify potential health risks at an early stage, and guide participants toward timely medical intervention and appropriate treatment. Additionally, the camp seeks to improve overall community well-being by encouraging healthy lifestyle practices and reducing the burden of preventable diseases through education, screening, and referral services.

DETAILS:

The Department of Optometry, School of Allied Health Sciences successfully organized the health check-up and eye screening camp. Our team started the day by travelling to Gagidih, where we arrived and reported at 9:30 AM. The setup for the eye screening camp took about thirty minutes. The program commenced with a short orientation speech by the Pro Vice-Chancellor Prof. (Dr.) Angad Tiwary, Dr. Manoj Kumar Pathak and Mr. Sarbojeet Goswami, who addressed the students on the importance of optometry as a profession. His talk included insights into the field of optometry, to promote healthy lifestyle choices and lessen the burden of avoidable diseases through education in order to enhance the general well-being of the community.

After the orientation, 97 individuals underwent individual examinations as part of Pranab Das eye screening program. Case history taking, visual acuity evaluation, torchlight examination, static retinoscopy, and subjective refraction were all part of the routine battery of tests used. Each participant's refractive error status was ascertained using subjective refraction results. All medical observations were methodically entered into the Outreach Activity Register of ARKA JAIN University and later brought back to the campus for further verification and record maintenance. The camp officially ended at 3:30 PM, following which all medical equipment was safely packed and transported back to the university.

TAKEAWAY (OUTCOMES):

The Health Check-up and Eye Screening Camp was conducted successfully and received active participation from the community. A significant number of individuals benefited from the general health examinations and eye screening services provided during the camp. Basic health parameters such as blood pressure, blood sugar levels, body mass index, and general physical health were assessed. The eye screening helped in the early identification of common vision problems, refractive errors, and eye-related conditions. Participants requiring further medical attention were counselled and referred to nearby hospitals or specialists for advanced diagnosis and treatment. The participants expressed high satisfaction with the Health Check-up and Eye Screening Camp. They appreciated the initiative and thanked the organizers for providing free and accessible healthcare services.

The camp increased awareness about the importance of regular health check-ups and eye care. Many participants gained valuable knowledge about preventive healthcare practices, healthy lifestyle habits, and eye hygiene. Overall, the participants felt that the camp was very beneficial and requested that such health and eye screening camps be conducted regularly in the future to support community well-being.
