OBJECTIVE: The Faculty Development Program (FDP) on "Design Thinking: Empowering Educators to Enhance Students' Learning and Engagement" aimed to equip educators with innovative teaching methodologies that foster creativity, problem-solving, and student-centered learning. Organized by the Centre for Capacity Building and Human Resource Development and the Department of Management (BBA) at ARKA JAIN University, the one-week FDP was held from December 9-14, 2024. Led by resource person Prof. Ujwal Prakash, Assistant Professor at the School of Commerce and Management, the program sought to help faculty members integrate design thinking principles into their teaching practices. The primary goal was to enhance student engagement, critical thinking, and overall learning experiences by fostering empathy, collaboration, and hands-on experimentation, allowing students to actively participate in learning and develop critical 21st-century skills.

DETAILS: The FDP was structured as an interactive and immersive learning experience over six days, with 35 participants from India and abroad actively engaging in the program. Each day focused on different aspects of design thinking and its implementation in education.

Day 1 introduced participants to the fundamental principles of design thinking, emphasizing the importance of a human-centered approach in education. Prof. Ujwal Prakash elaborated on how educators could leverage empathy to understand students' challenges and tailor their teaching methods accordingly.

Day 2 focused on defining learning challenges and identifying key areas where design thinking could enhance student engagement. Through collaborative discussions and brainstorming sessions, educators mapped out real-world classroom challenges and explored innovative solutions.

Day 3 delved into ideation techniques, encouraging participants to generate creative teaching strategies. Activities included mind-mapping, role-playing, and scenario-based problem-solving to develop student-centric learning methodologies.

Day 4 was dedicated to prototyping innovative teaching strategies. Faculty members worked in teams to develop lesson plans and teaching aids that incorporated design thinking principles. Hands-on activities helped them refine their ideas and make them more practical for classroom implementation.

Day 5 focused on testing and feedback mechanisms. Participants presented their prototypes and received constructive feedback from peers and experts. The iterative process allowed educators to refine their teaching strategies and adapt them for real-world application.

Day 6 concluded the program with a discussion on the long-term integration of design thinking in education. The session included reflections, success stories, and action plans for incorporating design thinking into various subjects. Participants shared their key takeaways and outlined how they intended to implement their learnings in their teaching practices.

OUTCOME: The FDP successfully provided educators with valuable insights into design thinking methodologies and their application in teaching. Participants gained a deeper understanding of how to create student-centric learning experiences that encourage curiosity and active participation. Faculty members left with practical strategies to foster innovation in the classroom, ultimately leading to improved student engagement and learning outcomes.

Additionally, the program facilitated knowledge-sharing among educators from diverse backgrounds, further enhancing collaborative learning. The feedback from participants was overwhelmingly positive, with many expressing enthusiasms for implementing design thinking strategies in their classrooms. The FDP significantly contributed to enhancing the overall quality of education by promoting an interactive and student-driven learning environment.

The event reaffirmed ARKA JAIN University's commitment to academic excellence and faculty development. As the only NAAC 'A' accredited state private university in Bihar, Jharkhand, and West Bengal in the first cycle, AJU continues to set benchmarks in higher education. This FDP was yet another step towards fostering innovation in teaching and empowering educators with tools to enhance students' learning experiences.
