OBJECTIVE:

To promote community engagement, sanitation awareness, and cultural understanding among the volunteers.

DETAILS:

A One-Day Camp and Sanitation Awareness Program was organized by the NSS Cell in association with the School of Humanities on 5 February 2026 at Bhuiyan Sinan, Patamda, with the objective of promoting community engagement, sanitation awareness, and cultural understanding among the volunteers. The camp provided students an opportunity to interact with the local community while learning about the social and cultural life of the region around the Dalma range.

The program began with the arrival of NSS volunteers and faculty members at the village, where they were warmly welcomed by the local residents and school authorities. The volunteers visited the Primary School of Bhuiyan Sinan, where a Sanitation Awareness Program was conducted for the school children and villagers. Through interactive discussions, demonstrations, and short talks, the volunteers emphasized the importance of personal hygiene, cleanliness of surroundings, proper waste disposal, and the role of sanitation in preventing diseases. The children actively participated and showed keen interest in maintaining a clean and healthy environment.

During the session, Dr. Rahul Amin, Assistant Dean, School of Humanities, addressed the gathering and highlighted the importance of community participation in maintaining sanitation and environmental cleanliness.

Dr. Manoj K. Pathak, NSS Cell In-charge, also addressed the participants and emphasized the role of youth in nation-building through service and awareness programs. He encouraged the volunteers to learn from rural communities and contribute meaningfully to social development through initiatives like sanitation drives and awareness campaigns.

Apart from the awareness activities, the camp also provided an enriching cultural exposure to the volunteers. The participants interacted with villagers and learned about the unique traditions, lifestyle, and cultural practices of the communities living around the Dalma range. The interaction helped volunteers gain a deeper understanding of the indigenous culture, local customs, and the harmonious relationship between the people and their natural environment.

OUTCOME: The program proved to be a meaningful experience for the volunteers, enhancing their sense of social responsibility, cultural awareness, and commitment to public health and sanitation.
